Larry Kahn is a senior associate at Freehill Hogan & Mahar, LLP. He is a 1992 graduate of Columbia University, where he received his B.A. degree and a 1995 graduate of Tulane University Law School where he received his J.D. degree, as well as a certificate of specialization in maritime law. While at Tulane, Larry was a managing editor of the Environmental Law Journal, earned the Maritime Law Center's Distinguished Service Award and was awarded the Bureau of National Affairs Law Student Award. He is a member of the New York and New Jersey bars, and is a member of the New York State, New Jersey State and American Bar Associations. He is also an active member of the Maritime Law Association of the United States, where he currently serves as the Chair of the Young Lawyers Committee.

Following graduation from law school, Mr. Kahn was the staff attorney at the Center for Seafarers' Rights. He entered private practice in 1998, joining Freehill Hogan & Mahar in 1999, and works in all areas of maritime law and commercial litigation. Larry has published two law review papers, on treasure salvage and maritime piracy, and has frequently been called upon to write and lecture on these topics, as well as on maritime crime and maritime security generally. He has been a featured expert on CNN World News and NBC Nightly News and has recently participated in The Heritage Foundation's efforts to formulate national policy on issues of international maritime crime.

Mr. Kahn is married and lives in New Hempstead, New York. He continues to fence in his spare time (he was a member of Columbia's NCAA Champion varsity fencing team and coached Tulane's fencing club) and is a member of Freehill's admiralty league summer softball team.
